

What is the course about?

This adult course in Winsford is for students who already have a basic understanding of neurodiversity and would like to develop their knowledge further. It explores how neurodivergence can affect people at different stages of life and in different settings.

Why should I choose the course?

This adult course will help you build on your existing understanding of neurodiversity and develop greater confidence in recognising different needs and experiences. You will explore practical ways to support neurodivergent people in education, everyday life, and the workplace.

What will I learn?

During the course you will:

- Refresh and extend your understanding of neurodiversity, key language, and common neurodivergent conditions.
- Explore how neurodivergence can affect learning, behaviour, communication, sensory needs, and emotional regulation.
- Consider the experiences of neurodivergent teenagers, including transitions, independence, overwhelm, and self-advocacy.
- Explore neurodiversity in the workplace and ways to make working environments more inclusive.
- Develop your understanding of how neurodivergence can present differently in women and girls.

What will the course lead on to?

The course can lead onto more detailed study in specific areas of neurodiversity, including qualifications such as the NCFE Understanding Specific Learning Difficulties course a Level 2 Certificate in Understanding Autism. It can also provide a useful foundation for further learning around autism, ADHD, education, workplace inclusion, or supporting neurodivergent people.
